PRESS RELEASE

Quiet Elegance: The Architecture of Hugh M. Kaptur

New film premieres during 2014 Modernism Week

Palm Springs, February 17: For Immediate Release

Palm Springs, CA— This 'n That Films announces the premiere of their newest film, Quiet Elegance: The Architecture of Hugh M. Kaptur at the Palm Springs Hilton during 2014 Modernism Week.

"We enjoyed working with Hugh and his lovely wife Helen during the filming of this documentary," said Bert Simonis, co-producer and writer of the film. "No request was too great and Hugh was generous with his time as we took him around Palm Springs touring buildings he created."

"Generally when we shoot biographical films, the subject is no longer alive. Having Hugh Kaptur explain his philosophies and ideas behind the homes and structures he designed is priceless," added John C. Brown, co-producer and editor of the effort. "His buildings look great on film and for us it was a thrill to look into the life of a starchitect."

Quiet Elegance: The Architecture of Hugh M. Kaptur has been selected for showing at the American Documentary Film Festival in April. The film is available for sale at the Palm Springs Visitor Center, the Palm Springs Museum of Art, the Raymond Lawrence store and on This 'n That Films website.

This 'n That Films previously released the award-winning documentary The Last First Comic. Last year's film, Mid-Century Moderns: The Homes That Define Palm Springs has shipped more than 1,500 copies around the world. This 'n That films is currently working on 88 Days in the Mother Lode: Mark Twain Finds His Voice about Samuel Clemens 88 day stay in Angels Camp and Jackass Hill in the winter of 1864-65, scheduled for release in February 2015.
