PRESS RELEASE

Quiet Elegance: The Architecture of Hugh M. Kaptur

Film accepted into several regional Film Festivals

Palm Springs, August 1, 2014: For Immediate Release

Palm Springs, CA— This 'n That Films is announcing their film, Quiet Elegance: The Architecture of Hugh M. Kaptur has been accepted for exhibition at the White Sands International Film Festival in Las Cruces, New Mexico and at the Twain Harte Film Fest in Twain Harte, California. The film premiered earlier this year at Modernism Week in Palm Springs and was part of a weeklong celebration for the career of Hugh M. Kaptur.

"I am humbled that so many people are interested in my work," says Hugh Kaptur, AIA. "I'm proud of the film that This 'n That Films made about me, and am thrilled that more people are seeing it."

"Hugh was an absolute delight to work with." said John C. Brown, director of the film. "He was extremely generous with his time and gave us full access to his archives and photo collection. We're proud to be selected and wish we could attend all of these Film Festivals in person, but we are hard at work on our next film 88 Days in The Mother Lode: Mark Twain Finds His Voice" Which is set to be released in February next year."

Quiet Elegance: The Architecture of Hugh M. Kaptur was previously selected for exhibition at the American Documentary Film Festival in March.

This 'n That Films previously released the award-winning documentaries The Last First Comic: Mid-Century Moderns which has shipped 1,500 copies worldwide; and Quiet Elegance which is now being seen at film festivals around the country.
